Highlights

- ☆ During 1960, the legislatures of 28 States and the Territory of Guam met in a regular or special session. The State legislative activity of interest to higher education is reflected in the approximately 376 legislative items concerning higher education which were reported as enacted or considered.
- ☆ Among the major areas of State legislation, items on bond issues, scholarships, personnel matters, trustees, and 2-year colleges were considered or enacted by more States than items concerning any other area of legislation.
- ☆ Comparison of general appropriations for current operations in particular States in 1960 with those of earlier years in the same States shows an increase in 1960, with State universities and land-grant colleges receiving the greatest percentage of this increase.
- ☆ The preponderance of State legislation during 1960 relating to scholarships, student loans, and tuition was in the nature of amendments to liberalize or equalize existing provisions of the law, rather than in the nature of proposals for new financial aids.
- ☆ There is a trend toward centralizing the financing of capital outlay projects by establishing State building commissions or authorities.

PREFACE

The Division of Higher Education presents its fourth annual review and digest of State legislation pertaining to higher education. Preparation of the manual is in keeping with the responsibility of the Office of Education to disseminate information on the status of education in the several States and Territories.

For aid in the compilation of this report, the Division of Higher Education is grateful to the officials of State departments and institutions of higher education and to the directors of State legislative reference services, who supplied basic legal documents for their respective States, reviewed preliminary drafts, and cooperated in the entire project. In addition, noteworthy assistance was given by the Council of State Governments; the Legislative Services Branch of the Office of Education; the Law Library of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; and the Law Division of the Library of Congress.

Initial data were secured by the State and Regional Organization Section of the Division of Higher Education and by William G. Land, Research Consultant in Education, Washington, D. C. The survey was accomplished under the direction of S. V. Martorana, Chief, State and Regional Organization Section, and Ernest V. Hollis, Director, College and University Administration Branch, in the Division of Higher Education of the Office of Education.

PART I

INTRODUCTION, GENERAL OBSERVATIONS, TRENDS, AND TENDENCIES IN STATE LEGISLATION RELATING TO HIGHER EDUCATION

Introduction

The primary purpose of this fourth annual review of State legislation on higher education is to provide information likely to be useful in planning future programs and budgets in higher education. In general, the legislation reported is limited to that directly affecting colleges and universities or that establishing policies in the field of post-high school education. This 1960 survey covers the higher education bills of legislative sessions which met between January 1 and December 31, 1960, as available to February 15, 1961.

Since this survey is made primarily for information or for administrative use, it does not attempt to serve the purpose of a legal analysis. Session law or act numbers, or the designation of the respective bills, have been supplied whenever available as references to the official documents. The completeness of the material for any one State, particularly with reference to the legislation introduced but not enacted, depends in part on the availability of printed bills or laws and in part on the success of cooperating officials in furnishing the material requested.

In accordance with previous practice, preliminary mailings of portions of this survey were made on September 1 and November 15, 1960, covering the material which at those times was sufficiently complete to be of use to academic administrators. Besides making the information generally accessible at an early date, this practice has also afforded each State an opportunity to review its own items and to make comments or revisions.

General Observations, Trends, and Tendencies

During 1960, there were 22 State legislatures, as well as that in Guam, which met in regular session, and special sessions were held in 6 additional States. Seven of the legislatures holding regular sessions also held adjourned, extraordinary, or special sessions. In 25 States and the Territory of Guam there were some 216 legislative enactments specifically related to higher education. In addition, approximately 160 separate measures (excluding identical or amended bills) were reported as introduced but not enacted. Because of changes in the reporting periods covered by previous surveys, it is not feasible to make strict comparisons of legislative activity in 1960 with that of the "off-year" 1958. The 1958 survey, which covered the period between July 1, 1957 and June 30, 1958, listed 271 enactments of higher education laws and resolutions.

Following the practice adopted in earlier surveys, the scope of legislative activity in the major areas of appropriations, physical facilities, institutional growth, student finances, and institutional personnel appears in chart form as Table 1, together with similar indications of activity with respect to trustees, educational surveys, and the 2-year college. The following observations and data relate to these eight areas.

Appropriations

As is apparent from Table 2, the percentage increase of general appropriations enacted by the 1960 legislatures for current operations is not as great as it was for 1959-60. In only 4 of the 11 States for which general appropriation materials were available for the last 3 years was there a greater increase than in 1959-60--California, New Jersey, South Carolina, and West Virginia. There was an overall dollar increase in the 1960 appropriations over the previous year of $52,796,578 within the 11 States shown in Table 2, the larger share of this increase going to the State universities and land-grant colleges, with State colleges ranking second in line and State junior colleges third.

West Virginia	13,690,355	14,464,474	5.7	16,946,237	17.2

* This decrease is due to an appropriation to the University of Kansas Medical Center which received in 1959-60 an appropriation of $3,725,036 and only $200,000 in 1960-61.

 The increase is only a fraction of 1 percent.

The reader should be cautioned of the unwiseness in making comparisons of appropriations among States due to the many fluctuations from one State to another in the content of appropriation bills, as well as the method of appropriating funds. Any comparison, therefore, should be made among the institutions of a given State rather than crossing State lines. An analysis here of capital outlay appropriations would be unfair to many States. Unlike day-to-day operating and maintaining programs of an institution, building programs are of a more fluid nature, a larger program being planned for one year with perhaps a few minor ones the next.

Physical Facilities

In 1960, although only three States passed legislation specifically authorizing new building construction, there were 20 State legislatures which included appropriations for construction, repair, or improvements in their various capital outlay enactments. The trend towards centralizing the financing of such projects is illustrated by the establishment of a State Bond and Building Commission in Louisiana to underwrite a general capital outlay program not restricted to, but specifically including, higher education. Thus, even though most of the specific proposals for new buildings were not enacted by the Louisiana legislature, the final enactment of a general program established a broad base of authority for future projects. In Massachusetts, a new building authority was established to provide dormitories and other student facilities at the University of Massachusetts under a trust agreement with the Commonwealth. This action illustrates the tendency to utilize quasi-governmental corporations when building construction cannot be financed directly by legislative action.

Although the 1957 survey did not include the amount authorized by State legislatures in the bond issue enactments of that fiscal year, the decline in the number of bills in subsequent years proposing bond issues, together with the following data reported for 1958, 1959, and 1960, suggests that the States may already have provided for the immediate needs of financing building construction at State-supported universities and colleges. These figures represent the total approximate amount reported in the 3 years covered by these surveys under the category of bond issues authorized:

1958 - $228,100,000
1959 - $409,500,000
1960 - $104,300,000

As was noted in the 1957 survey, the high incidence of State legislation relating to the issue of bonds for financing the construction of dormitories and auxiliary revenue-producing facilities was directly related to the loan program of the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency. It is also noteworthy that the 1957 survey showed that 27 States enacted laws relating to bond issues, building construction, or housing facilities; 14 States in the "off-year" 1958; 37 States in 1959; and only 10 States in 1960. The year 1961, when most State legislatures convene, will more clearly indicate the trend of legislative activity in this area.

Institutional Growth

As a concomitant of increasing enrollments, particularly those of undergraduates, institutional growth is indicated by the expansion of the programs and physical plants of existing institutions and the establishment of new institutions. During the four years covered by these surveys, there have been 68 legislative enactments in this area, as summarized below:

	Number of Enactments for:
Year	Expansion or Reorganization	New Institutions Authorized
1957	16	11
1958	6	7
1959	14	2
1960	7	5

Another indication of growth, especially as it may reflect a changing or already changed objective or academic program, is legislation authorizing a change in the name of an institution. Enactments of this nature, each affecting one or more institutions, have occurred as follows: 1957 - 17; 1958 - 1; 1959 - 14; 1960 - 5. In some instances such changes of name were long past due; in others, they represent an awareness of administrators or institutional supporters of the need for a status symbol in keeping with their concept of educational value. Many a university in name, however, may be simply a post-high school institution affording additional schooling; conversely, there are some institutions which still bear the name college or institute which regularly award doctoral degrees.

In 1960, three of the legislative enactments relating to institutional expansion provided for the establishment of branches, extension centers, or research centers; two dealt with relocation for purposes of expansion; one provided for the absorption of an existing technical institute by an institution of higher education; and one provided for two existing institutions to be consolidated into a new institution.

Student Finances

The preponderance of State legislation during 1960 relating to scholarships, student loans, and tuition was in the nature of amendments to liberalize or equalize existing provisions of the law. Two States, Michigan and Virginia, enacted laws to create higher education assistance corporations to administer State student loan programs. There were also a number of proposals, especially in New York, to allow parental income tax deductions or exemptions based on college attendance of dependents. The Rhode Island legislature passed a resolution recommending such a provision with regard to Federal income taxes. The trend in State legislation thus appears to be shifting from the provision of new financial aids to the alteration of existing laws and the possible provision of indirect as well as direct benefits. Such a trend indicates a continued national anxiety over the costs of obtaining a college education or professional training.

The following figures show the number of State legislative enactments reported from 1957 to 1960 which authorized new or expanded scholarship or loan programs or which made appropriations for them aside from the regular budget appropriations:

	Number of Scholarship or Loan Program Enactments for:
Year	General	Teacher-training	Health Fields	Science or Engineering
1957	16	6	2	1
1958	4	4	5	2
1959	19	4	4	0
1960	6	0	3	0

From the above data it appears that State legislatures are finding that general scholarship or loan provisions are adequate to cover special demands for the training of teachers or science majors, but that advanced training in medicine, dentistry, and other related areas of public health requires special administrative and financial attention.

As was noted in the 1958 survey, the long-standing practice of some States in requiring some future service in return for teacher-training scholarships or loans has set a pattern for the support of training in other fields, and also became the basis for the "forgiveness" clause in Title II of the National Defense Education Act of 1958. Following the passage of that Act, there were 10 State legislative enactments in 1959 and two in 1960 that specifically referred to its provisions for higher education.

Personnel

The subjects of faculty, employees, salaries, and retirement are regularly dealt with in State legislation. In 1957 and 1958, much of the concern in this area was to bring State provisions into conformity with the Federal Social Security laws. In 1959 and 1960, most of the bills enacted dealt with the details of benefits, salaries, or status rather than with general policies. Two proposals in California in 1960, however, indicate attempts by college faculties to seek legislative authority for the establishment of academic councils for the purpose of formulating faculty programs and presenting recommendations directly to trustees.

Trustees

As enrollments have increased and institutions have expanded the attention of the legislatures have turned to the boards which control and govern these institutions. In addition to creating boards to govern new institutions, legislatures have been acting upon such matters as change in method of selecting board members, length of terms for trustees, number of members to serve on boards, and changing the names of boards of control to agree more completely with the names of institutions they govern. In 1957, 8 States enacted legislation relating to trustees, while in the "off-year" 1958 only 2 States passed such bills. An increase of interest in this field is evidenced, however, in the fact that 21 States in 1959 enacted legislation in this area and 8 States in the "off-year" 1960.

Surveys

In the legislative enactments reported in the 4 years covered by these surveys, there have been 25 States which made provision for some type of statewide survey of the facilities, finances, programs, or administration of higher education: Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, and West Virginia. These are in addition to those States, such as New York and New Jersey, which had already instituted surveys, or which had earlier provided for coordinated systems of higher education. The following figures indicate the number of State legislative enactments relating to various types of higher education surveys during the 4-year reporting period:

	Number of Survey Enactments for:
Year	Localities or Institutions	Programs, Curricula, or Degrees	Statewide Higher Education	Junior Colleges
1957	9	2	8	1
1958	2	3	9	2
1959	5	1	10	1
1960	1	1	3	1

Approximately one-half of these 59 enactments authorized, continued, or otherwise affected statewide surveys. A comprehensive analysis of the statewide studies that have emerged from these enactments has been made and the outcome reported in another Office of Education publication.[1/]

2-Year Colleges

In 1960 there were 13 enactments relating to junior and community colleges, junior college districts, and State aid (in addition to those funds supplied in regular budget appropriations) to junior colleges as part of the public school system. While many of these enactments affect administrative detail, others indicate wider progress. For instance, a Colorado bill passed as a rider to the public school appropriation act amended the State aid provision for junior colleges in order to provide a direct grant of $300 per student per year. In Arizona, a State junior college system was created under a separate governing board empowered to establish junior colleges and to plan for the integration of existing junior college districts. This legislation also authorizes bond issues by the districts and provides for State aid. The Rhode Island legislature, on the other hand, utilized the existing Board of Trustees of State Colleges in authorizing the establishment of three new 2-year colleges, which are to be established and put into operation during the next 6 years. The California plan for higher education, establishing the functions of the junior college and its place in the statewide system, received formal approval in the 1960 legislative session.

During the 4 years in which State legislation has been reported in these surveys, there have been 115 enactments specifically dealing with the following areas of 2-year college legislation: organization and administration; finances; bases on which State aid is provided; and curricula, degrees, and standards. Many of the general organization acts listed below include also the areas of finance, State aid, and program. These acts, however, are listed only in the Organization and Administration column.

Year	Organization and Administration	Finance	State Aid Provision*	Curriculum, Degrees, Standards
1957	24	14	6	5
1958	4	4	1	1
1959	32	2	7	2

General

Most State legislation deals with the immediate administration of State-supported institutions, including provisions for the support or aid of junior and community colleges and, in a few States, of privately controlled institutions. There is such wide variation in State legislative practices that comparisons cannot be made on the basis of legislation alone. This is particularly true with regard to institutional finances, which may be affected by the continuing effect of earlier enactments, as well as by variations in the handling of receipts from tuition, fees, and other State and Federal sources. In general, where the governing boards of institutions or of State systems of higher education have broad governing powers, the amount of legislation required may be relatively small. In other States, the most minute authorization may require legislative action. Nevertheless, the total quantity of legislation in the major areas of higher education is indicative of the relative importance of these areas at various times. In sum, if not in detail, the direction which State legislation takes reflects those forces which support, control, and direct the destinies of higher education throughout the Nation.
